Program

Interfaces play a key role in the urban water cycle. They link a large number of compartments, enable and catalyze numerous processes, and thus significantly affect the behavior of the overall system..

Come join the second international conference revolving around this innovative research topic and its highly interdisciplinary approaches and meet experts and young scientists of the field.

Within our session topics of interfaces in Urban Watersheds, Urban Freshwater Ecosystems, Urban Hyporheic Zones and Sewer Systems, we highlight the sub-topics:

- ~ Urban Water (Re)Cycling
- ~ Microbiology & Nutrient Cycle
- ~ Water Composition & Pollutants
- ~ Numerical Flow & Transport Modeling

We will provide a platform for presenting state of the art insights and novel findings from an international interdisciplinary community.

We encourage contributions from the international scientific community as well as representatives from water engineering practice and administration.

Call for Abstracts

Contributions can be submitted until 15.1.2024 via the registration website.

Abstracts should be no longer than 500 words and should be assigned to one of the four topics as well as one of the sub-topics.

Please indicate whether you would like to give a talk or present a poster.

Registration fees

Regular contribution	200 Euro
(Doctoral) students	100 Euro

We can offer a limited number of conference grants upon application.
